Fatality Review

Fatality Review Internship Program provides field practicums in the fields of human services (primarily social work, nursing and public health). Under the guidance of OCME staff, interns will assist with writing comprehensive case summary reports for the Child Fatality Review Team and Infant Mortality Review Team and presenting these reports to partnership agencies. Interns will gain skills in data entry management, comprehensive report writing, analyzing multi-disciplinary records, identifying trends, conducting research on best practices for fatality prevention and additional program initiatives, and build relationships with various appointed members of fatality review committees. The internship is a semester long program and interns are expected to be available for two full days per week during regular business hours. Students enrolled in a graduate level program in the fields of human services are eligible to apply.
